Drawing lines: On the India-China 25th Special Representatives' talks

“India and China advance border talks to secure stability, requiring public transparency for lasting trust.”

17 August 27, 2026 · 2 min read

DAILY EDITORIAL READER

Following Tuesday's talks between the Special Representatives (SRs) on the boundary question, India and China have agreed to substantial¹ outcomes on managing the disputed border. According to an eight-point consensus² released on Wednesday, both countries have agreed to advance discussions on “an early and substantial¹ harvest of boundary delimitation³”. They have agreed to hold next month a meeting of an expert-level mechanism on trans-border rivers and to maintain communication on sharing hydrological data, which India has been pushing for⁴. Two additional meeting points to hold talks between top military commanders will be set up, along with two new channels of hotlines in the Eastern and Middle Sectors. National Security Adviser Ajit Doval and China's Foreign Minister Wang Yi reaffirmed⁵ the efforts taken over the past two years to keep the peace along the Line of Actual Control, and committed to⁶ continuing the on-going normalisation⁷ in relations. That the NSA's visit to Beijing took place before India hosts the BRICS Summit, on September 12, underlined⁸ both sides' keenness⁹ to continue with this process of re-engagement¹⁰, with the expected visit of Chinese President Xi Jinping after a gap of seven years. An October 2024 meeting between Prime Minister Narendra Modi and Mr. Xi kickstarted¹¹ this calibrated¹² effort towards normalcy, and a 2025 meeting in Tianjin helped continue the momentum¹³. It is apparent¹⁴ that both sides see continued engagement at the highest level as key to sustaining¹⁵ this process of normalisation⁷.

The dual tracks of the SR meetings and the Working Mechanism for Consultation and Coordination on border affairs, a body comprising¹⁶ diplomats and military officials, have worked well towards keeping the borders generally stable over the past two years. The latest outcomes will certainly help in keeping the peace. Less clear is how both sides intend to take up the task of border delimitation³. Neither side has explained which parts of the border they plan to delimit, or whether they are reconsidering the 2005 agreement on Political Parameters and Guiding Principles, under which the SRs were tasked with¹⁷ first agreeing a framework to settle the boundary. While both sides in Beijing reaffirmed⁵ the 2005 agreement, Article 10 of its text notes that it is only on the basis of the framework that both sides can delineate¹⁸ the boundary. Tangible¹⁹ progress on the border dispute must certainly be welcomed. However, agreements made without public visibility²⁰, notwithstanding²¹ their merit²², may invite suspicion. As India and China continue negotiating their long-running boundary question, it is imperative²³ that they bring their publics along.

Grounded: On Tamil Nadu's Parandur airport project

“Scrapping the Parandur airport project risks harming Tamil Nadu's long-term infrastructure and economic growth goals.”

August 27, 2026 · 2 min read

DAILY EDITORIAL READER

The Tamilaga Vettri Kazhagam (TVK)-led government, in dropping¹ the ₹27,400-crore greenfield² airport project at Parandur near Chennai, appears to have considered the opposition to the project without weighing the consequences. The decision follows an electoral promise made by Chief Minister C. Joseph Vijay, who had visited the protesters in January 2025 to express his solidarity³. The government says the move is aimed at protecting the interests of farmers and local residents. It has also cited the presence of waterbodies and has alleged commercial motives behind the site selection under the previous DMK government. Notwithstanding⁴ these official reasons, all valid to varying degrees, it became clear from the day Mr. Vijay became Chief Minister, on May 10, 2026, that the decision was merely a formality⁵. In fact, much before the announcement, on August 24, work on the project had come to a halt⁶. However, the move is likely to have adverse⁷ consequences for Tamil Nadu. The move risks creating a general perception⁸ that Tamil Nadu is unstable in its infrastructure policy, which the TVK government should have avoided, given its goal of making the State a $1.5 trillion economy by 2036.

While Mr. Vijay has spoken of identifying a new airport site, his proposal for a Terminal 5 at the existing airport is necessary and welcome. However, it is common knowledge that a greenfield² airport will take years to materialise⁹, even with unwavering¹⁰ government attention — the idea for a second airport had been under consideration¹¹ for over 25 years. At one stage, the Union government had wanted it to be developed on a build, operate and transfer mode. Unfortunately, the project was caught in the game of political one-upmanship¹² between the two Dravidian majors. Meanwhile, Bengaluru and Hyderabad have had new second airports since 2008, despite regime¹⁸ changes. Passenger traffic here has grown at Tamil Nadu's expense¹³ — at an annual average rate of 10% during 2016-26 compared with 2.4% in Chennai. Parandur received the Union government's final nod in July 2024, after much groundwork¹⁴. When the State government is not the ultimate authority in airport site selection, it would not be appropriate to¹⁵ attribute motives to¹⁶ the DMK. Land for any mega project has always faced landowner resistance¹⁷ and the TVK regime¹⁸ may experience this while identifying a new site. No development project can take place without disturbing¹⁹ the environment and certain sections of society. Even Amsterdam's busy Schiphol airport sits over an area that was once a lake. At the existing airport in Chennai, a runway was affected by the severe floods in 2015. What policymakers should bear in mind²⁰ is the need to balance development and climate change challenges. Chennai needs more runways, not just new terminals.

Devendra Fadnavis government's anti-conversion law, language diktats shrink Mumbai

“Divisive identity politics and regressive social diktats threaten to derail Mumbai's progressive economic momentum.”

August 27, 2026 · 2 min read

DAILY EDITORIAL READER

Ez Editorials

Two stories are unfolding¹ in Mumbai on the watch of² the Devendra Fadnavis government. Since his first term in office, the Chief Minister has become the face of a welcome governance and infrastructure-building push in the country's financial capital. The other story is disquieting³ by itself, and also potentially undermines⁴ the gains of the first — take the Maharashtra Freedom of Religion Act, which comes into force⁵ this week. Christian pastors across the Mumbai Metropolitan area have asked congregants⁶ to submit a “self-declaration” that they attend prayer meetings of their own volition⁷ — this is because the Act comes against the backdrop of⁸ harassment of congregants⁶ and disruption of meetings by groups like Bajrang Dal and VHP, and in the aftermath⁹, the police's one-sided action.

Over the last month, seven out of the nine FIRs registered have been against those who organised prayers — and two against the Bajrang Dal. The Act is draconian¹⁰, and flies in the face of¹¹ the Supreme Court ruling in Rev Stanislaus v State of Madhya Pradesh (1977), which laid down the parameters¹² for the constitutionality of laws against conversion. The recent spate of¹³ anti-conversion laws in several states reverse the burden of proof¹⁴. The Maharashtra law prescribes harsh punishments, asks for intimation¹⁵ to the district magistrate in advance and allows parents, siblings and relatives, not just the individuals involved, to complain to the police. In this context, the “self-declaration” is a form of insurance against a law that is all too vulnerable to¹⁶ misuse.

Fadnavis rose to prominence¹⁷ as a young leader in a state where politics and governance are often overshadowed by nativism¹⁸ and overtaken by parochialism¹⁹. He seemed to acknowledge that ease of doing business requires a more governance-oriented approach by a state with a light touch. But the recent push to force auto and taxi drivers in Mumbai to learn Marathi is another symptom of the backsliding²⁰. It sends out the message that the government is focusing more on a narrow and performative politics of identity even as it takes a toll on²¹ the city's economic activity, and undermines⁴ citizens' right to work and mobility. The fact that members of a minority community that is part of the fabric of²² Mumbai feel the need to sign pre-emptive²³ declarations is a stain on the Constitution's promise of freedom of conscience²⁴ and the right to practice and propagate religious belief. It is now for the government and ruling party to ensure that these fears are allayed²⁵. The financial capital of the country cannot flourish if it tries to dictate the language the people speak and what they believe.

A death at IIT-Delhi and the many invisible struggles on campus

“Premier academic institutions must dismantle hyper-competitive cultures to safeguard student mental health and well-being.”

August 27, 2026 · 2 min read

DAILY EDITORIAL READER

By all accounts¹, Rishikesh Kumar from Bihar was a bright young man who had made it to IIT-Delhi in pursuit of² a dream. Physics fascinated him; poetry offered another outlet for his creativity. Yet beneath the promise and ambition was a young man struggling with mental-health challenges. His death, allegedly by suicide on August 22, has once again brought into focus the helplessness that can lurk³ beneath the surface of hyper-competitive institutions. Kumar's death was the eighth such incident at the campus since 2023.

Over the last five years, the IITs have been proactive⁴ in acknowledging that access does not always translate into⁵ comfort and belonging. Measures such as supernumerary⁶ quotas for women and athletes in undergraduate courses to enhance diversity, and the creation of posts such as the dean of student well-being, recognise that the pressures within elite campuses are shaped as much by the collision⁷ between identity and expectation as by an intensely competitive environment. The pressure does not end with securing a place at an IIT; for many, it simply changes form — from the struggle to get in, to the struggle to keep up⁸ and fit in⁹. A 2023-24 IIT-Delhi committee described a culture of post-coaching burnout¹⁰, and alienation¹¹ among marginalised¹² and first-generation students. It makes every setback — from a failed relationship to an inadequate score — feel unusually consequential¹³.

Following protests, IIT-Delhi has set up a committee to conduct a probe¹⁴ into Kumar's death. But the questions go beyond the campus. Far too often, mental health is looked at through the prism of¹⁵ individual histories. But for young people who have demonstrated remarkable fortitude¹⁶ in coping with pressures along their journey to some of the country's premier¹⁷ institutions, what explains their inability to deal with what follows? It is this contradiction¹⁸ that parents and educators must address with urgency. How can environments be built where ambition and well-being go hand in hand¹⁹, where counselling creates safe spaces, where empathy shows youngsters how to regulate²⁰ their response to life's vagaries²¹? The road ahead must involve a rethinking of the culture of competition itself, so that institutions do not merely produce high achievers, but are home to thriving²² young people.

URGENT AND REFLECTIVE

"serious and calling for change"

EXECUTIVE PERSPECTIVE

The author adopts an urgent and reflective tone to highlight the recurring tragedy of student suicides in elite educational institutions. By examining systemic alienation, intense competition, and the gap between academic admission and actual social integration, the piece argues that elite universities and parents must move beyond superficial remedies to foster truly supportive, empathetic environments.
